None. 0 0.[Lung cancer in the population of West Slovakia in the years 1970-1978]. A retrospective study of lung cancer prevalence in the area of West Slovakia within 1970-1978 was performed using data on several different sources. The studied cases accounted for 7.9% of all cases of malignancy in that period. Both sexes were equally affected. We did not identify any statistically significant difference in lung cancer prevalence between men and women. The index of detection among deceased subjects (means of the last 3 years of all subjects who died in the area of West Slovakia) were higher among women but not significantly so. The diagnosis and certification for lung cancer cases were significantly delayed for men in comparison with women in the period from 1973 to 1978. The cancer was more frequent in subjects 65 or older than in those under 65 years of age. The presence of exogenous pulmonary carcinogens was not significantly associated with the observed prevalence of lung cancer. However, cigarette smoking was significantly associated with the prevalence of lung cancer in the whole study area and in the age group 65 or over. We noted the following significant differences in the studied prevalence of lung cancer by sex and age: (1) incidence in women was in every age group higher than in men, (2) females older than 65 were more likely to have the cancer than younger women, and (3) those aged 65 or over were more likely to die from the cancer than those under 65 years of age.Herbicides, torts and profits. The court of last resort of the United States, the United States Supreme Court, has heard and decided cases involving claims of crop damage from herbicides. This article reviews the court's decisions as well as court decisions of other jurisdictions, and conclusions. The matter of liability or nonliability of the manufacturer/seller of a herbicide depends upon the state law of torts and contract. In the United States, federal law regarding product liability applies in federal question cases. Yet, state law applies where federal standards are not applicable. The court has allowed the development of a crop damage tort action by including language in the product liability sections of the Restatement (Second) of Torts. State law governs, and provisions in the Restatement (Second) of Torts allow for recovery by the farmer in a case where he uses the herbicide in a commercial manner. But the Restatement includes provisions which bar recovery of loss of an entire crop. In addition, the Restatement and the Illinois and Kentucky Supreme
